

The Matriarch recently released our debut EP, 'Welcome to The Matriarch', on October 8th. The EP contains five songs and reflects five sides of The Matriarch. The band itself is an exploration of music, identity, compassion, growth, sisterhood, what it means to be a beginner, and what it means to do something for yourself. In the EP, we delve into beginnings, endings, and the never-ending cycles in between. You can stream the EP now on all platforms!

Welcome to the Matriarch

Poem written by Mal Babcock and Al Erftenbeck

"Welcome to the Matriarch" she said

Casting their enchanting touch on my skin Like a warm hug but from within, a feeling akin to a drunken state

Only this time I was not lonely, not distracted nor afraid But surrounded by unconditional lovers and peacemakers among the shade

A new hue of green outlining the hills as fairies plant their flowers

Yet with no expectation of power, only respect for the harmony that flows

Now running through me, a willful acceptance for all my being

The deepest part of my heart meeting to greet the light Dandelions guide my feet in a dance of imperfections A faint song playing from above, as if being sang by the sun

Or perhaps the mourning doves exploring the purple blue skies

Hands softening as one, folding in to kiss the clouds
And into the story untold I follow
